Leading the Future of Financial Services

Our original founder, John D. Rockefeller, is widely credited with establishing the first full-service family office in the United States, later known as Rockefeller & Co. Since 1882, we have stood beside members of the Rockefeller family, helping guide them through opportunities and challenges as they occur — daily, and over the course of seven generations. As their needs evolved over time, so have the capabilities of the firm. Today, Rockefeller Capital Management offers this same type of service, care and trust to a broader base of clients to help them unlock the potential of their investments.

We continue to learn from our heritage and seek out new and innovative ways of working, using our past success to help us continue leading the future of financial services.
